DID YOU KNOW?

The Common sandpiper, a petite wading bird, breeds in close proximity to fast-flowing rivers, lakes, lochs, and reservoirs in Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland, and Northern England. During the winter season, these birds can be found along the southern coast. While in the spring and autumn seasons, passage migrants can be spotted on the fringes of freshwater lakes or on estuaries. When stationary, the bird tends to bob up and down, a behaviour called 'teetering', and it exhibits a unique stiff-winged flight.
